List

Two thousand million or so years ago two galaxies were colliding; or, rather, were passing through each other. A couple of hundreds of millions of years either way do not matter, since at least that much time was required for the inter-passage. At about that same time—within the same plus-or-minus ten percent margin of error, it is believed—practically all of the suns of both those galaxies became possessed of planets.

```

The screenshot shows the WordPress Gutenberg editor interface. The top part displays the post title "Arisia and Eddore" in a blue box. Below the title is a paragraph of text: "Two thousand million or so years ago two galaxies were colliding; or, rather, were passing through each other. A couple of hundreds of millions of years either way do not matter, since at least that much time was required for the inter-passage. At about that same time—within the same plus-or-minus ten percent margin of error, it is believed—practically all of the suns of both those". The bottom part of the image shows the CSS Inspector tool. The selected element is `.wp-block.editor-post-title__block.has-fixed-toolbar`. The style pane shows the following CSS rules:

The screenshot shows the WordPress Gutenberg editor interface. The main content area displays a paragraph block with the text: "Two thousand million or so years ago two galaxies were colliding; or, rather, were passing through each other. A couple of hundreds of millions of years either way do not matter, since at least that much time was required for the interpassage. At about that same time—within the same plus-or-minus ten percent margin of error, it is believed—practically all of the suns of both those galaxies became possessed of planets." Below this is another paragraph: "There is much evidence to support the belief that it was not merely a coincidence. E. E. "Doc" Smith".

Before & After

This screenshot shows the WordPress editor interface for a post titled "Arisia and Eddore". The main content area contains a large heading "Arisia and Eddore" followed by a paragraph: "Two thousand million or so years ago two galaxies were colliding; or, rather, were passing through each other. A couple of hundreds of millions of years either way do not matter, since at least that much time was required for the inter-passage. At about that same time—within the same plus-or-minus ten percent margin of error, it is believed—practically all of the suns of both those galaxies became possessed of planets." Below this is a quote: "There is much evidence to support the belief that it was not merely a coincidence." attributed to "E. E. 'Doc' Smith". A bulleted list follows: "Be that as it may", "Arisian records are clear upon the point that before the two galaxies began to coalesce,", and "There were never more than three solar systems present in either". The right sidebar shows the "Status & Visibility" section with "Public" visibility and a "Publish" date of "Mar 17, 2019 7:49 pm". There are also sections for "Permalink", "Categories" (with "Uncategorized" checked), "Tags", "Excerpt", and "Discussion".

This screenshot shows the same WordPress editor interface, but with the post content updated. The heading "Arisia and Eddore" remains. The main paragraph is now: "Two thousand million or so years ago two galaxies were colliding; or, rather, were passing through each other. A couple of hundreds of millions of years either way do not matter, since at least that much time was required for the inter-passage. At about that same time—within the same plus-or-minus ten percent margin of error, it is believed—practically all of the suns of both those galaxies became possessed of planets." The quote section is now a blockquote: "There is much evidence to support the belief that it was not merely a coincidence." attributed to "E. E. 'Doc' Smith". The bulleted list is now: "» Be that as it may", "» Arisian records are clear upon the point that before the two galaxies began to coalesce,", and "» There were never more than three solar systems present in either". The right sidebar is identical to the previous screenshot, showing "Public" visibility and "Mar 17, 2019 7:49 pm" publish date. The "Categories" section still has "Uncategorized" checked.

Before & After

This screenshot shows the WordPress editor interface for the post 'Updating Kubrick for Gutenberg'. The title bar indicates 'Edit Post < Updating Kubrick for Gutenberg — WordPress - Mozilla Firefox'. The browser address bar shows 'localhost/wordpress/kubrick-gutenberg/wp-'. The WordPress admin bar includes 'My Sites', 'Updating Kubrick for Gutenberg', '0', '+ New', 'View Post', and the user 'Howdy, joe'. The editor toolbar has 'Switch to Draft', 'Preview', and 'Update' buttons. The main content area shows the title 'Arisia and Eddore' and the following text: 'Two thousand million or so years ago two galaxies were colliding; or, rather, were passing through each other. A couple of hundreds of millions of years either way do not matter, since at least that much time was required for the inter-passage. At about that same time—within the same plus-or-minus ten percent margin of error, it is believed—practically all of the suns of both those galaxies became possessed of planets.' Below this is a quote: 'There is much evidence to support the belief that it was not merely a coincidence.' attributed to 'E. E. "Doc" Smith'. There are three list items: '» Be that as it may', '» Arisian records are clear upon the point that before the two galaxies began to coalesce,', and '» There were never more than three solar systems present in either'. The next paragraph reads: 'Since nothing material was destroyed when the Eddorians were forced into the next plane of existence, their historical records also have become available. Those records—folios and tapes and playable discs of platinum alloy, resistant indefinitely even to Eddore's noxious atmosphere—agree with those of the Arisians upon this point. Immediately before the Coalescence began there was one, and only one, planetary solar system in the Second Galaxy; and, until the advent of Eddore, the Second Galaxy was entirely devoid of intelligent life.' The final paragraph states: 'Thus for millions upon untold millions of years the two races, each the sole intelligent life of a galaxy, perhaps of an entire space-time continuum.'
